

Final Product Wizard Changes

By Ken Aiken

This past year I've made a few changes to the Final Product Wizard. Most obviously, I moved all of the options to tabs so the dialog doesn't take up the entire screen.

- On the General tab you have your data and check boxes to enable different outputs, and Channel Condition Reporter options when that output is selected.
The Sort tab allows you to do a different sort for your contouring, plotting and ENC overlay. Each of those tabs also have a button to copy your sort parameters to the other sorts.
- The Contouring tab is the same as the contour section was.
- The Plotting tab has one nice addition for editing the plots title blocks. One important thing to make note of is that the edits to title blocks in FPW will be saved to the plotting sheet.
- The ENC Overlay tab for overlay export. This will take your sorted points and if available your contours to a s57 overlay chart. If you are familiar to the overlay export in ENC Editor this tab should be very familiar to you.

At the bottom is everything remaining: the Run button along with the status and progress bar.
